

FIDELITY SELECT FUNDRANKER™

Volume 1 Issue 8

August 2006

July Performance

The Top Eight Model Portfolio's best performers were Natural Gas, Energy, and Gold, but they had only fractional gains. Natural Resources and Energy Service had losses between 1% and 2%, Industrial Materials and Air Transportation had losses between 4% and 6%, and Transportation was the Portfolio's worst performer with a loss of over 10%.

The Top Eight Model Portfolio and the Nasdaq Composite tracking portfolios were down 2.9% and 3.7%, respectively, while the S&P 500 tracking portfolio was up 0.6% for July. Despite a large majority of the Select funds now having negative 1-, 3-, and 6-month returns and a number also having negative 12-month returns, the Top Eight Model Portfolio is still up 6.2% YTD. The Nasdaq Composite tracking portfolios is down 5.0% YTD, while the S&P 500 tracking portfolio is up 3.3% YTD, respectively.

August Exchanges

The Top Eight Model Portfolio's four worst performers, Transportation, Air Transportation, Industrial Materials, and Energy Service, fell out of the Portfolio. They are replaced by Utilities, Food & Agriculture, Pharmaceuticals, and Banking.

Staying Invested Revisited

Review of the charts in Fidelity Select Fundranker shows the Top Eight Model Portfolio has had some volatile, sideways movement the past few months, but it is nothing that it hasn't done at other times in the past. Fidelity Select Fundranker does not predict the next move in the stock market up or down, but it does attempt to position you as well as possible for whatever move does occur. Fidelity Select Fundranker's rating system is an excellent indicator of how well each of Fidelity's Select funds is performing in current market conditions. As you can see from the charts, staying invested and making sure you reap the benefits of market upturns more than makes up for being invested during market downturns.

Roth IRA Update

Ever since Roth-IRAs were introduced in 1998, some taxpayers with higher incomes have not been allowed to make use of them. Starting in 2010, however, the new tax law removes the income cap ($100,000 AGI, not including conversion income) on conversion of Traditional and SEP IRAs to Roth IRAs. At that time, higher income taxpayers can weigh the benefits of converting some or all of their balances in Traditional and SEP IRAs to Roth IRAs.

Taxpayers with higher incomes have always been able to make non-deductible contributions to traditional IRAs, but the new Roth conversion rules make these non-deductible contributions much more attractive. Starting in 2010, a high income taxpayer can make non-deductible contributions to a Traditional IRA and then immediately convert the Traditional IRA to a Roth IRA. Since the contribution was non-deductible, made with after-tax dollars, only earnings made between the contribution and conversion would be taxed. In effect, this strategy will allow high income taxpayers to contribute yearly, albeit indirectly, to a Roth IRA and reap the benefits of tax free growth in Roth IRAs that lower income taxpayers have enjoyed since 1998. Of course, it is possible that Congress will act before 2010 to limit or remove this loophole.

Holding Period Alert

The Top Eight Model Portfolio did not require any exchanges for July, but if you made additional investments in any of your funds or made exchanges to balance the amounts in your funds after the July 3 exchange date, you should make sure that you have held the new shares for 30 days to avoid Fidelity's short-term trading fee. Count the day you made the additional investment or exchange as day one. You can exchange without short-term trading fees on the first business day on or after day 30.
